The Masker.

I have a smiling face, she said, I have a jest for all I meet, I have a garland for my head, And all its flowers are sweet— And so you call me gay, she said.

Grief taught to me this smile, she said, And wrong did teach this resting bold; These flow ris were p neked from garden-bed While a death-chime was tolled; And what now will you say? she said.

Behind no prison-grate, she said, Which stars the sunsbine half a mile, Live captives o uncomforted As souls behind a smile; God's pity let us pray, she said.

I know my face is bright, she said— Such brightness dying suns diffuse, I bear upon my-forchead shed The sign of what I love— The ending of my day, she said.

If I dured leave this smile, she said. And take a moon upon my mouth, And the a cypress 'round my head, And let my tears run smooth—

It were the happier way, she said. And since that must not be, she said I fain your bitter world would leave. How calmiy, calmly, smile the dead— Why do not, therefore, grieve!

The yea of heaven is yea, she said. But in your bitter world, she said, Face joys a costly mark to wear, 'Pis bought with panys long nourished, And rounded to despair, Grief's earnest makes life's play, she said.

Ye weep for those who weep, the said—
Ah, fools! I bid you pass them by.
Go weep for those whose hearts have bled
What time their eyes were dry.
Whom sadder can I say? she said.
